China Clipper Is Forced Back To West Coast

Clipper Encounters Trouble
600 Miles Out Over Pacific
And Turns Back

LANDS SAFELY
AT LOS ANGELES

Sixteen Persons Aboard Plane—Gasoline Line To Motor Breaks

(BULLETIN)

San Pedro, Cal., Jan. 22.—A gas line break to return to the mainland, Pan American Airways' China Clipper with 16 aboard, made an emergency landing in Los Angeles harbor today.

Because of a heavy fog over her home base at Alameda, from where she took off late yesterday, the big ship was ordered to land here.

The clipper encountered trouble 600 miles out, according to Capt. J. H. Tilton, in command of the ship, when a gasoline line to one of the motors broke.

Taking No Chances
At an early hour this morning, Capt. Tilton said the fuel line had been repaired and the ship could have continued on to Honolulu.

However, he said, in line with the company's safety policy, it was decided to turn back instead of taking any chances with an emergency repair job.

As Captain Tilton set his course for San Pedro, he contacted the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, flagship of the fleet, and was advised the ship was standing by to give any assistance needed.

At 6:35 a. m. (PST) the big craft made a perfect landing far out in the harbor and taxied gracefully across the water to Reeves field, navy air base.

PA NEW OBSERVES

Pa. News has learned that the young dog, that strayed into the high school building this week and was cared for by the janitors, has been adopted by Jack Patton.

Of interest to passengers of the buses on the north and west sides of town are the new, smooth running buses. These have been running for a week now, and promise to be of great satisfaction.

Any autoists who were driving last night discovered that there was an exceptionally dense fog hanging over many of the highways, at least near this city.

Happening to be downtown at 1:30 o'clock this morning, Pa. News was surprised at the large number of people on the streets, and the traffic activity that was evident.

Speaking to one merchant here yesterday, Pa. News was told business was better than it was at this time last year in his case.

The hot weather yesterday and the rain was the cue for many folks to get out the hose and beams, to wash off the soot and dirt that has accumulated on the sidewalks and porches.

Although we are in the automobile age, the horses have not all gone out of business. This morning we saw seven splendid Belgian crosses being transported to Freeport, in a large truck.

Young Republicans From Western End Of State In Session Here

Approximately 100 young Republicans from all over western Pennsylvania are gathered in The Castleton Hotel today in a regional conference which has for its purpose the inclusion of more young voters in the ranks of young Republicans and a discussion of the coming campaign. The discussion will be more academic than objective, as it is understood that no candidates or factions of the party are to enter into the discussion.

The meeting is not that of the regularly organized Young Republicans of the state, although many county chairmen of the organization are present and the state president, Frank Hilton, of Reading, is present. With him is Ernest Leet, national committeeman of the organization, from Jamestown, N. Y.

Samuel Greer, chairman of the Young Republican Club of Butler, Pa., is the chairman of the day. Opening the meeting this morning at 11 o'clock, he said the conference was not called in behalf of any candidates, but for a discussion of methods in the coming campaign and for the purpose of increasing the membership of young voters in the Republican party.

Opposing War Makers In Japan Means Death, Says Knickerbocker, In Discussing Politics Of Nation

(Editor's Note: There in Japan who dare to oppose the war-makers face death. H. R. Knickerbocker, noted foreign correspondent of International News Service, reveals in the sixth article of his series "The Yellow Typhoon And Red Storm Warnings." PARIS, Jan. 22.—Who dares oppose the war-maker in Japan is killed. Otherwise complicated, Japanese politics contain this one clear guiding principle.

The record in Tokyo tells why no voice has been raised against the present war in China, and why the army and navy may continue to commit one aggression after another upon western powers with such impunity that even the painfully diplomatic Times of London breaks down and declares:

Dangerous Job.
"The incidents show that the Japanese crusaders are not susceptible to control by the Japanese government nor to military discipline as it is understood in other countries."

Report Britain And U. S. Agree On Plan To Build Battleships Over 35,000 Tons

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Britain's highest ministers at a cabinet meeting next Wednesday are expected to decide upon the empire's future naval program, authoritative sources declared today.

Meanwhile, the government awaited the results of inquiries that its ambassador at Tokyo, Sir Robert Craigie, has been instructed to make. He was told to ask the Japanese government whether it plans to build battleships of more than 35,000 tons.

Reports Japan Building
In the face of Japanese denials, there are reports which are taken with utmost seriousness in London that Japan is constructing three capital ships of more than 43,000 tons and is expected to build still more of these "sea monsters."

The reply that Japan gives to Sir Robert's inquiries, it was stated, will aid the British in deciding whether they may begin construction of even 46,000-ton ships, even bigger than the suspected Japanese man-of-war.

Report Smashing Coup On Loyalists

Planes Attack Troop Trucks

Rebels Claim 3,000 Loyalists In Spain Are Killed Or Wounded

ANOTHER RAID ON SALAMANCA

The rebel headquarters reported that 37 insurgent planes had bombed 100 government trucks loaded with Loyalist troops on the Huesca sector.

New Bombardment

Earlier both the insurgent and government capitals, Salamanca and Barcelona, listed a fresh dose of death from the skies.

Insurgent war planes, striking last, killed seven and wounded 20 persons in Barcelona. Government aircraft, in retaliation, attacked Salamanca, killing nine and injuring 20.

OPPOSING WAR MAKERS IN JAPAN WILL BRING DEATH

know their trade. It is to terrorize. By killing they aim to make the next incumbent in office remember all opposition to war.

February 9, 1932, they shot Junnosuke Inoue, ex-minister of finance, and on March 5th assassinated Baron Takuma Dan, head of the sugar-trust, Mitsui company.

Saburo Aizawa, active lieutenant of the imperial army, became dissatisfied with the "pacifism" of the army's board of military affairs and assassinated its director, Lieutenant General Nagata, August 12, 1935.

Seek To Kill All In Power

Finally in the famous February affair of 1936 a group of young officers and civilians led 1480 soldiers in the audacious attempt to kill everybody in power who had ever attempted to exercise the least check on their desire to put the emperor on the throne of the world.

For three days they held Tokyo in terror, limited their victims like animals, killed Admiral Makoto Soito, former premier; Keneiko Takahashi, finance minister; and Lieutenant General Jotaro Watanabe, inspector-general of military education, besides a dozen minor people.

They behaved with blood-curdling ferocity. Premier Keisuke Okada escaped because the assassins after killing the four police officers on duty at the official residence, mistook Okada's private secretary for the premier and, after killing him, went on to kill Count Makino.

They believed him to be hiding in a room, so burned it down. They murdered Watanabe in his wife's imploring arms. The grand chamberlain, Admiral Kantaro Suzuki, was left for dead when his wife threw herself across his body gashed by several bayonet wounds, and pleaded to let him die without more butchery. As Saito died his wife received a bayonet in her side.

Those aged Japanese wives shielding their husbands with their own bodies came off best in this savage story, every word of which is now in the official Japanese record.

Remove Moderates

The purpose was to remove all "moderates" who had the ear of the emperor. His imperial majesty's chief counselor, the 67-year-old Prince Satomura, last of the Geiroy, was first on the death list but he escaped.

This was the last "patronage" murder drive until now. The revolt was suppressed by the emperor's own dictate. The assassins and ringleaders were tried, 17 of them condemned to death, of whom 15 have been shot, and 80 others sent to prison. For the outside world this seems to constitute a victory for law, order and civilian government. Not at all, for the executed men have entered the hall of martyrs for the Japanese army and the imprisoned men are new.

Taking responsibility for the "incident" which is the Japanese term for anything from a mass murder to the war with China, five members of the high military council, the famous generals, Araki, Abe, Mazaki, Hataishi and Terauchi, resigned, while General Minami, commander of the army in Manchuria, of the famous Honjo-Minami memorial Japan's duty to conquer the world, and General Honjo himself, chief aide-de-camp to the emperor, retired.

Spirit Of Army

They had more than a formal responsibility for the February murders because they were the spiritual leaders of the war party. Today they have had their way. Their spirit is the spirit of the Japanese army now smashing through China.

Most of them have been restored to positions of responsibility. Minami to the governorship of Korea. Their school-mate and pal, General Iwane Matsui, is commander-in-chief of the Shanghai-Nanking army. Terauchi is commander in north China. The head of the Manchurian army, called Kwangtung army in Japan, is of their school, General Keishichi Ueda, who is chief of staff.

General Seshiro Itagaki, is of the school even more radical in that were possible, of the famous Lieut. General Dohara.

No War Party Defeat

It was the gravest error for the outside world to believe that the judicial liquidation of the February assassins meant a defeat for the war party. On the contrary, the wholesale murders and attempted murders intimidated the civilian leaders of Japan until parliamentary government ceased to function and since the war began with China the Japanese parliament has become like Hitler's Reichstag, a cheering section for the military.

Once more the medieval code of the fighting knight of Japan, the clan of Choshu in the army, and the clan of Satsuma in the navy, controls the like of Japan. The Samurai are again on top.

There remains the ancient rivalry between the fighting services. What does that rivalry mean for the outside world?

In Shanghai the head of the largest British firm told me what happened when a Japanese shell landed in a pile of lint in one of his textile mills and failed to explode.

It was a most dangerous object, and the British mill owner asked the British army to send its ordnance experts. They came, saw, and declared the shell too menacing to touch. They recommended that a tank be built around it and filled with water. The mill owner then asked the Americans. They said the same. The French sent their experts and gave the same verdict.

Finally the mill owner asked the Japanese to send their experts. A delegation of Japanese army officers arrived, stiffly but thoroughly examined the shell, and regretfully announced they had to agree with their white colleagues: the shell could not be touched.

That afternoon the mill owner, disgruntled and sore, observed a lone Japanese in civilian clothes drive to the mill, come in and ask: "Where is the unexploded shell?"

"Oh, what do you want to see it for?" exclaimed the mill owner. "Your people have been here already, and said it's too dangerous to move."

"What people have been here?" politely inquired the Japanese.

"The Japanese army, of course," replied the mill owner.

"But I," said the little Japanese, gravely, "I am the Japanese navy. I am here, picked up the shell, carried it to my car and drove off."

The Japanese army and navy must be rivals but only for the glory of Japan, to put the Rising Sun on every peak throughout the globe. Who dares oppose, must die.

DETECTIVE DENIES GIRL CONNECTED WITH ARRESTS MADE

broke after the Baumgardner girls name was brought into the Conn investigation yesterday.

The story began when it was learned Monaghan had arrested Bernard Masulla, 24; Pete Soren, 21; Chas. Ford 20 and Booker Johnson, 42, and had taken them to Ohio.

While they were outside Freeport, O., starting a re-enactment of the shooting of Patrolman Conn, the name of the Baumgardner girl was injected into the case at St. Clairsville.

There it was reported that Johnson, a negro, had told another prisoner that he and the three other prisoners had kidnapped Miss Baumgardner, taken her to a house in Stuebenville, and later moved her to Pittsburgh.

This "confession" was verified by Col. Lynn Black, superintendent of the Ohio Highway Patrol, who said he had heard it from Deputy Sheriff Joe Zeik. He added that he did not believe it, and branded Johnson a dope addict.

Deputy Sheriff Zeik today denied he had given out any such story. Cleveland police asserted that Johnson had been in Ohio penitentiary in May when the beautiful 19-year old coed disappeared.

Inspector Monaghan contended that as far as he was concerned the name of the Baumgardner girl had never entered the case. Col. Black and he were both convinced that the man was involved in killing of the patrolman.

Miss Baumgardner's mother, Mrs. Emma Baumgardner, of the exclusive Cleveland suburb Lakewood, said Johnson's story sounded "just like hundreds of other meaningless clues."

Doubts Confession

Gastor Stekler, private investigator for the Baumgardner's family, admitted he had heard about Johnson's "confession," but said he doubted its truth.

Freeport district attorney of Harrison County, O., declared that he doubted the story also, but added:

"All the things that seem so strange about this case will be cleared up in a few days."

It was admitted by all, however, that a girl was with the killers of Patrolman Conn and that she was likely to appear in the case. Conn was shot seven times when he investigated a parked automobile near Freeport. O. Investigators have learned that a girl was in the back seat with a negro.

Monaghan and two assistants will follow the grand jury at Cadiz, O. yesterday. The jury was directed to meet again today.

spect the "legitimate" rights and interests of other powers in China. His choice of words in repeating this assurance, nevertheless, left observers with the feeling that Japan intends to decide for herself what rights and interests of western powers in the Far East may be considered "legitimate."

Regret Over Bombing

Navy Minister Yonai ended his speech to the Diet with an expression of Japan's "sincere regret" over the bombing and sinking of the American gunboat Panay in the Yangtze river by Japanese planes.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, in his address, reviewed foreign relations as they affected Japan and referred to the attacks on the Panay and the British gunboat Ladybyrd.

"It was feared for a time," he said, "that these incidents might lead to alienation of feeling between Japan and the United States and Britain."

"We rejoice with thanks that the calm, fair-minded attitude of the governments of both countries and the sincerity of our government and people made it possible to bring the incidents to an amicable settlement."

to choose. The forces of reaction are promising an unknown warrior as a candidate, one who has risen above his fellows and made no enemies, one who is not a rich man but who has the means to finance his own campaign. I say to you that for such a candidate there is just one descriptive phrase of three words—just like London."

"They cry peace when there is no peace. Their idea of peace is to have you accept a candidate of their selection. If you have any ideas of your own you are classed as an upstart. They classify men as irregular when they do not approve. Who are they to classify anybody as irregular when they are the same men who in 1930 advised Republicans in Philadelphia to vote to the polls and vote for John Hemphill?"

"The time has come to name names. I am convinced that there is but one man who can lead the Republican party to victory this year and that man is the man who twice before was selected as governor of Pennsylvania by the will of the people, Gifford Pinchot. Here in the western end of the state we have a right to be represented on the ticket. Again I say to you that the man who should be on that ticket for lieutenant governor is Frank A. Harris of Pittsburgh."

Kane's address was received enthusiastically by about 80 per cent of those present. The mention of Harris' name brought a burst of applause by the delegates and as he finished the entire group applauded Kane for a speech that was a fighting speech.

ville. From the township supervisors, Michael Conti. From the junior Chamber of Commerce, O. D. Foster, A. C. Formner was presented as a business man in the district in which the road would run.

The commissioners agreed with the delegation that the road would be of advantage and promised to lend their official support already made. On Tuesday the commissioners have an appointment with Joseph Burke, district engineer of the state highway department and at this meeting the proposal will be taken up.

Property owners along the right of way have already signed waivers of damages, the next step is for the township to declare it a road and it is hoped a WPA project can be sponsored to reduce the road to grade. After that would come the movement to have the state take over the road and build a highway.

Fellow Rotarian:

One of the most fascinating stories is that of the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania and the development of its many uses. It was first sold in drugstores as a hair tonic. That may be the reason for so many bald headed old timers around here.

Monday we will hear this story from a man who is national secretary of the Oil Refiners, James E. Moore, head of Oil City.

Those of you who have paid your dues will find your membership card enclosed. We will be glad to enclose others as soon as they pay up.

Clare Book made up at Braddock. We do not get the clubs of district 180 nor do we get Beaver county clubs. We lose Cambria county and our district will be reduced to 27 clubs.

To Continue Expansion

Asserting that the subsidiary companies will continue the $253,000,000 expansion begun in 1933 with the expenditure of $80,000,000 scheduled for this year, Fairless said:

"There has been abundant testimony before this committee of plans which are held in abeyance because of the present inactivity on the part of certain persons responsible for launching the planned expenditures to see the proper economic present demand and the financing thereof in view of the many uncertainties ahead."

The defendants were charged with having adopted, without authority, certain policies and practices of the defunct NRA petroleum company, expanding and extending them to their own advantage.

"I was the collection of the oil license that the government charged, and the bureau proposed to charge the industrial oiling and the date of the NRA order in 1935 and 1936."

Judge Stone, in charging the jury yesterday, said the defendants had no authority for concerted action to elevate prices.

Originally 46 individuals, 25 of whom oil companies and four subsidiaries, were indicted. Defendants named the docket down to 10 times and 30 individuals.

MORE CONSTITUTION TINKERING

ALTHOUGH Senator Norris' lame duck amendment was adopted in eleven months and prohibition repeal was effected even more quickly, he believes it should be made still easier to amend the Constitution. So he has proposed a new plan which is to be considered by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

His resolution provides that when congress submits a proposed constitutional amendment the question shall automatically be placed on the ballot at the next general election in each state. Ratification would depend on an affirmative vote in two-thirds of the states.

The lame duck amendment was submitted to the legislatures and the repeal amendment to state conventions of delegates elected on the pending issue. Mr. Norris' proposal has been endorsed by numerous senators, including several who led the successful fight against the president's plan to make over the Supreme Court by statute.

Perhaps if it had become the rule to let conventions instead of legislatures pass upon proposed constitutional amendments, thus bringing them closer to the people, there would be less support for Mr. Norris' latest suggestion. The convention method insures a virtually direct vote by all the people sufficiently interested to express their will regarding proposed constitutional changes.

Adoption of Mr. Norris' proposal would require still another amendment. It is a sound maxim that the less tinkering with the Constitution the better unless there is absolute need for an addition to the fundamental law. The burden of proof in this instance rests squarely on Senator Norris.

RECOGNIZING OBLIGATIONS

The faith in the future of America which caused John D. Rockefeller, Sr., one of the world's greatest fortunes has been expressed by his son, John D. Jr., with the announcement that he would speed completion of Rockefeller Center through erection of three more buildings at a cost of approximately 12 million dollars. He estimates the program will provide the building trades with one million man-days of employment.

"The practical answer to the problem of unemployment is to find jobs for men who want to work," Mr. Rockefeller declared. "In the last analysis, business and industry alone can provide the jobs necessary to restore the nation's economic well being. When relief measures extend beyond a stop-gap period, they inevitably tend to destroy the self-respect and initiative of the men and women dependent on them."

In these words, Mr. Rockefeller recognizes the obligations of business and proposes to do something about them. Other industrialists likewise are launching building projects to provide employment at a time when jobs are needed. More "Economic Royalists" like those men would solve many of our problems.

CHINA FIGHTS BACK

With the Chinese time has never been a pressing factor in life. Patience is one of their virtues and endurance is another. They have never burned themselves out, which is probably one reason why the axes are kind to them. Wars come, also famines and floods, but they endure.

Recent dispatches from China gain in significance when considered against the background of the nation's long history. They indicate that China's will to resist has not been broken by the almost uninterrupted succession of military reverses experienced since the Japanese invaders landed on her soil and that a new spirit and a new determination are making themselves manifest.

From Chinese sources come reports, at least partially confirmed by Tokio, of really sensational Chinese successes, including the capture of the town of Tsinan, after a surprise counter-attack delivered over the frozen Grand Canal, a Japanese retreat in Shansi before General Chu Teh's reformed Red Chinese fighters, and a serious Chinese threat to Japanese military positions around Nanking. Regardless of the degree of accuracy of these reports, they must be accepted as at least significant of revived power and determination on the part of the Chinese armies and their leaders.

Those who view the Chinese cause with favor must concede reluctantly that the Japanese invaders have moved forward at a tremendous rate of speed. On the brighter side of the picture, however, there is the heartening circumstance that the human resources of China have been drawn upon to only an infinitesimal degree. Within the last six weeks alone, it is reported, recruiting in the central provinces is said to have added 500,000 men to Chiang's strength. Furthermore, Chinese morale apparently is unimpaired.

Already the war in China has been prolonged far beyond the expectations of the Japanese war lords, who had planned and hoped for quick success through a swift, merciless and ruthlessly destructive campaign. Such a campaign has been conducted and victory has not been won. Every day the war is prolonged increases the danger that Japan, approaching bankruptcy, will be plunged into an upheaval at home.

Experience of twenty years ago proved that when the home front cracks under the strain, troops in the field, regardless of courage or competency, are beaten.

They say Speaker Bankhead's hard look discourages long speeches, which makes him the ideal man for the job.

Psychologist Adler says never tell a fairy story to a child. And it's also of questionable wisdom to tell a fairy story to the wife.

Moralists say that swing music leads to necking. There are, no doubt, trenchant sayings that will be interested to know this.

A whiff of new Swedish gas will instantly sober a drunk, which amounts to a complete loss of the proceeds from a heavy investment.

The White House has adopted a peaceful attitude toward business, at least until the swelling in the left eye of business goes down and the cut in its lip begins to heal.

Notwithstanding all of their practice, the marksmanship of Japanese fliers fails to improve to any appreciable degree. One of the last bombs aimed at China landed in Siberia.

ORGANIZATIONS FOR GIRLS

"DEAR DR. MYERS: Just what are your reactions on the matter of girls' organizations? I mean particularly the Campfire Girls, Girl Scouts, the Juniors of the American Legion Auxiliary, etc.?"

"If you favor them at all, what would you do if your daughter did not seem to show much enthusiasm towards them?"

"Last fall my daughter (who was 10 years old then) joined the Campfire Girls and I was pleased. She attended the meetings but never was really enthused over it and simply went because her chum went."

"But her chum of last year has moved away, and now my daughter doesn't attend the weekly meetings of the Campfire Girls at all, although she is a member in good standing. I questioned her but didn't get much out of it except that she thinks the group she is with don't do anything interesting."

"Now then, supposing she is in a group of uninteresting children and with a guardian who doesn't know just how to pep things up, would you suggest my trying to find a more interesting group for her to join with, or would it be better if I just let the matter ride?"

"Or would you suggest encouraging my daughter to join some other type of organization, that maybe she is out of tune with the whole idea and atmosphere of the Campfire Girls?"

"May Be Poor Mixer"

"Do you think that a lack of enthusiasm on the part of my girl suggests that she is a poor mixer (as I secretly mistrust), and that perhaps it would be a good idea to insist on her attending the meetings? How can a parent help a child to become a good mixer, friendly with other children, and at ease with strangers?"

"Answer: For most children, I am enthusiastic over Campfire Girls, Girl Scouts, and the like. Unless your child shows excessive over-crowding and can't afford the evening out each week on account of school homework, see that she attends regularly for at least a stretch of one year. If at the end of that time she indicates dislike of the organization, or disinterest in it, suggest to her that she join another. The worst she can do is to grow indifferent and attend only occasionally. A child misses much who does not learn to be loyal to a cause she espoused in all seriousness."

"Some non-social children don't ever learn to be good mixers in these organizations, though we think they should. They also need informal, frequent contact in and about the home with other children—not always easy to accomplish."

"I wrote a booklet to lonely, timid children from 11 to 18 years of age: 'Learning to Be Likable.' It might help your child, even help you to help her. A good many parents say I have. Perhaps you can find it in your library."

Worse than that—they may weary the people—and a facile man "representing action" rather than talk, has succeeded President Roosevelt in 1941 and become a Fascist dictator. One fearful of people after another never settled a grave problem. Close, thoughtful leadership is required. Big Business itself is today afflicted with this conference idea—while, may explain its helplessness when economic and social trends overtake it.

Annual Service Of Social Service At Trinity Episcopal

Pertinent Problems Of Christianity And Industry To Be Discussed

Christianity and industry will be stressed in the annual observance of Social Service Sunday tomorrow in Trinity Episcopal church at the 11 a. m. service. This is the subject that is most before the country now in the light of the conferences being held at the White House between the President, labor leaders, and business men. Because it is supremely important to the maintenance of peace and tranquility in the country that justice shall prevail among men engaged in industrial occupations and that money may be available with which to carry on business, these are matters which concern the well-being of all life Christianity. The Rev. Philip C. Pearson will draw upon the experience of a great and successful industrial leader, who has published his findings for the benefit of Christians on just such a day as Social Service Sunday. This service is for the regular worshipers of Trinity church, but in addition it is for all social workers, and those engaged in any form of civic betterment. Special Scripture readings, psalms, hymns have been selected for the occasion. The prayers will include supplications for social justice, for all poor, homeless, and neglected folk, for every man in his work, for those in industry, for a new world order.

Pittsburgh Under Blanket Of "Smog"

Traffic At Standstill, Airplane Schedules Disrupted, City In Darkness

(International News Service) PITTSBURGH, Jan. 22.—A dense smog, impossible for today's sun, over Pittsburgh and its environs. No sun was visible. Night merged into day with no appreciable increase in light.

Downtown pedestrians wound their way through the "Golden Triangle" in the semi-darkness. Sky-scrapers were studied with lights. Automobiles and trolley cars used headlights.

Traffic was at a standstill at the county airport. No airplanes have arrived or departed since yesterday morning.

U. S. Weatherman W. S. Brozman blamed the pall on extremely low-lying clouds, coupled with smoke and termed "smog" by local residents.

"The clouds are hanging the ground," he explained. "This happens once or twice a winter." He held out little prospect that the dense smog would lift soon.

C. I. O. Leader Is Free At Warren

Gus Hall Of Youngstown Pays Fine Of $500 And Gets His Release

(United International News Service) WARREN, O., Jan. 22.—Gus Hall, Youngstown C. I. O. leader, was free today after paying a $500 fine to the charge of malicious destruction of property.

Originally charged with illegal possession of explosives, Hall was allowed to plead to the lesser offense when Prosecutor Paul Reagan told Judge Frank Cope that evidence was not sufficient to assure conviction on the explosives charge.

Five other men, all of Warren, also pleaded guilty to malicious destruction charges. They were Mike Spellach, Basil Long, George Karathos, Dan Bucci and Joe Bronk. All were arrested during the steel strike last summer after national guardsmen narrowly escaped injury when dynamite was hurled from an automobile they were pursuing.

WASHINGTON AT A GLANCE

Monopolies Are Public; Private

Regulation Of Agriculture Held First Step In Public Monopoly

WATERED STOCK SCATTERED FAR

Central Press
Washington Bureau
602 Times-Herald Bldg.
By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—At the same time that we Americans have been developing certain trends which seem to me and quite a few other folk pretty decidedly over-governmental, we appear also to have been developing a considerable sentiment in conservative opposition to various opposite trends, on the ground that they are radically socialistic, which formerly were not generally considered a bit radical.

MONOPOLISTIC SERVICES

Some services obviously ARE naturally monopolistic. The telephone, for instance.

I can remember when many of our large cities had each two phone companies—NATL.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Rival trolley or bus lines cannot parallel one another's tracks on the same street.

No one city can have two lighting systems—unless a municipal system arises in competition.

municipal waterworks; now private ownership has gobbled many of them.

Manifestly these activities had to become or remain public services or gravitate into the hands of private monopolies. A citizen was regarded as entitled to the opinion that public ownership of that class of utilities OUGHT to be public—and he was not classified as a socialist or Communist, Fascist or Nazi for thinking so.

PRIVATE MONOPOLY

But the drift was the other way. Private ownership gradually swallowed nearly everything.

It is not to be blamed for being monopolistic. It NEEDED to be that. It is to be blamed, if at all, for having been hogish—which appears to be an inevitable monopolistic characteristic.

The bulk of the public consists of the monopolies' customers. They resent the exactions of the monopolies. If they had their say they undoubtedly would advocate public acquisition of the monopolies.

In the meantime, however, the monopolies have scattered their securities (stocks and bonds) here, there and everywhere, and the holders of these securities cannot afford to have their securities' exaggerated valuations deflated. And they would have to be deflated to liquidate them into public ownership.

PUBLIC HAS THE "WATER"

For example:
I always believed in public ownership of natural monopolies.

Yet, two generations ago, my father invested his savings in certain of these monopolies (preferred stocks and bonds). I inherited them. They were based on watered valuations. I know it. If the public takes these monopolies over—which it cannot legitimately do without squeezing the water out of them—where, in the vernacular, do I get off to?

The difficulty is that crookedness reaches so far into the past (my father was flim-flammed back in the 1890's or thereabouts) that it is ancient history.

My stake is too small to signify. However, I could quote authorities who insist that certain public services (like the postal service) would have been better in private hands. Think of that! The post-office! Heaven knows it's bad enough as it is. But imagine private management!—and what it would cost!

You would not think that the post-office was recommended as a private monopoly, would you?

Well, it is.

set of bits. A miter box. Chisels. And a tool chest, too.

If that small boy would climb into that show window and work a fairly complicated jig-saw puzzle—if he could put it together in 15 minutes—he could have his choice of two prizes. He could have those splendid tools, or he could have a gold safety razor. The boy didn't want the razor, but he did want those tools. More than anything else in the world he wanted to feel them in his hands, ripping through wood driving in nails, planing off little curls of pine or oak. His hands itched for them. His soul was hungry for them.

I was that small boy and I climbed into that window and, all flushed and anxious and nervous and wanting tremendously to win, I sat down before that puzzle—before all those friends of mine outside on the sidewalk—and tried to work the puzzle. . . . But I failed! Most miserably, most humiliatedly I did. . . . I failed and another boy won the prize. Another boy who didn't care about winning nearly as much as I did. His father was a carpenter and there were hundreds of fine tools in HIS family. The other boy was years away from shaving, too. Neither of the prizes meant much to my friend, Elmer Plasket. . . . And so, since he wasn't tense, he put the puzzle together in about 10 minutes and put the gold razor in his pocket and went proudly home.

Well, I learned something from that. I learned that if you think too much about what you're going to get, you can't do nearly as well as you should. If you try too hard and tie yourself into an anxious knot, you cut your power in half. But if you take the task easily you can probably go farther than anyone thought you could.

We learn, or we should LEARN, from our humiliations. And we ought to be as proud of our profitable defeats as we are of our victories that teach us nothing. . . . Nevertheless I do wish that young boy had put that puzzle together and won that chest of tools. That victory might have meant more than that defeat. . . . He did learn something, but it wasn't much fun and the memory of it still stings a little.

AROUND CITY HALL

Local skaters have enjoyed themselves considerably at Cascade Park this winter and city council and sportsmen's organizations here can provide summer sport at the lake should they be able to arrange to stock the lake with game fish. Cascade Park and the lake belong to the city and if no charge is made for fishing it is believed that the State Fish Commission would not be adverse to stocking the lake. There are some fish in the lake and almost any morning during spring and summer one can see small boys fishing there. There is no sport more wholesome than fishing, so why not endeavor to have the lake stocked?

With spring not so far distant it is likely that Parks Director Joseph D. Alexander and the parks commission will soon make plans for the summer season. It is probable that the golf course will be in good condition. Improvements are being made at Cascade Park.

City attorneys stated today that an answer to Harry Clark's bill of equity against the city which installed some posts for parking meters in Long avenue will be made in Lawrence county court soon.

During traffic court at the city building yesterday a new angle developed in the parking meter ordinance situation when several persons who operate passenger cars for commercial purposes and such are so labelled asked to be excused from paying $1 for not having deposited a nickel in the machines. They said they were under the impression that because their machines were used to carry on their business they should not be required to pay a parking fee. Mayor Charles E. McGrath excused the operators of such conveyances yesterday but made no promises to them that he would excuse them again in the future.

Mayor Charles E. McGrath stated today that on Monday he will ask councilman's opinion as to whether or not parking zone meters should become inoperative every week night at 8 p. m. At present, meters operate to 8 p. m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and to 9 p. m. on Saturday. Because many stores close at 6 p. m. Saturday, His Honor said he is inclined to believe it might be a good plan to stop operation of the meters at 6 p. m. For the present, however, the meters will operate each Saturday until 9 p. m. unless council decrees otherwise.

1909—Wireless was used the first time to save lives at sea, after the S. S. Republic collided with the freighter Florida off Nantucket, Mass.

5 Years Ago—Missouri was the 36th state to ratify the 20th amendment, making it effective. Are you sure you know what reform it brought? A clue: It will prevent F. D. R. from having a full eight or 12 years in the Presidency.

Lawrence County Farms And Farmers

By H. R. McCulloch, County Agent

FARM ACCOUNTS

The importance of the farm account is often overlooked by the farmer. It is a record of the farm's income and expenses, and it is the only way to know where the farm is making or losing money. A good farm account will show the farmer the exact cost of his crops and livestock, and it will show him the exact amount of his income. This information is essential for the farmer to make wise decisions about his farm's future.

There are several simplified farm account forms available to farmers. These forms are designed to be easy to use and to provide the farmer with the information he needs to make wise decisions about his farm's future. The forms are available from the Pennsylvania State College, and they are free of charge.

REDUCE SOIL LOSSES CAUSED BY EROSION

Any good farmer looks for ways to reduce soil losses caused by erosion. Erosion is a major problem for many farmers, and it can cause a great deal of damage to the soil. There are several ways to reduce soil losses caused by erosion, and the farmer should choose the one that is best for his farm.

The most common way to reduce soil losses caused by erosion is to use contour plowing. This method involves plowing the land in rows that follow the contour of the land. This helps to prevent the soil from being washed away by the water.

Another way to reduce soil losses caused by erosion is to use strip cropping. This method involves planting crops in rows that are separated by strips of grass or other vegetation. This helps to prevent the soil from being washed away by the water.

There are many other ways to reduce soil losses caused by erosion, and the farmer should choose the one that is best for his farm. The farmer should also consult with the county agent for more information about these methods.

GARDENERS SEEK BEST VARIETIES TO PLANT

Home and market gardeners of Lawrence County appreciate the quality of home-grown vegetables and look to their local plant grower for the best.

For earliness of maturity and high quality the following list is suggested:

Letuce—Grand Rapids, New York No. 12 or 15, and White Boston.

Onions—Riverside Sweet Spanish, Parsley—Moss Curled (Paragon).

Little Change In Stock Market

Price Changes Generally Are Of Little Significance Today

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service
Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The stock market opened moderately today with price changes generally of little significance.

The market opened somewhat lower and continued to slip until support was met mid-way through the first hour. Then a slow recovery from extreme lows was affected, with a few scattered issues reaching previous rising levels.

Representative utility issues, as North American, Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light, Public Service of N. J., and Columbia Gas & Electric, slipped slightly.

Chrysler, in motors, changed a fractional loss into an equal gain, then settled back around its previous close. General Motors eased some. Bethlehem backed and filled around last night's final price, while U. S. Steel lost a little ground. Copper recovered most of their early small declines, with Kennecott virtually unchanged.

A few issues suffered water losses before meeting support. Case dipped 1 1/2 at its low, Johns-Manville two, while International Harvester, Owens-Illinois Glass, U. S. Gypsum and DuPont each were off more than a point at one time.
